

Price Center on chopping block; Dixon & Costello plan fight first

By Edward T. Hearn
PRJ Washington bureau

WASHINGTON — A national magazine report the week suggests three Illinois military bases, including the Charles Melvin Price Center in Granite City, could be on the chopping block if Congress accepts the recommendations of a special commission on base closures.

But the U.S. News & World Report edition of Oct. 24 that names the Illinois bases drew instant fire from Illinois Democratic Sen. Alan Dixon, an opponent of the base closing commission, which is developing criteria to use in selecting a list of unneeded domestic bases.

The article, appearing under the ominous-sounding headline "Military Bases That Must Go," said the U.S. Army's Price Center was a likely candidate for extinction, along with Fort Sheridan and the Great Lakes Naval Training Station in the north Chicago suburbs.

The Price Center, at the crossing of Illinois 3 and Niedringhaus Avenue, has operated for 46 years, seeing its most active role during World War II.

Today, the 930-acre base, equipped with day care centers and post exchanges, employs about 900 civilian and military personnel. It has 64 families in residence and an annual budget of $8.6 million, according to Army spokesman Dan O'Boyle in St. Louis.

It serves as the support center for all Defense Department personnel in this metropolitan area. A contract has been awarded for construction of 100 additional military apartments at the Granite City base.

U.S. Rep. Jerry Costello, whose 21st District includes the Price Center, said he didn't agree with predictions of the Price Center's demise, adding he would fight such an attempt.

"There's nothing to say it will be closed. We don't think it's a likely target and I will fight it, as will Sen. Dixon," Costello said.

Dixon, in a letter to the U.S. News editor, said he was "guilty" of being the "chief protector" of the Illinois bases, as the magazine stated. He then cited the importance of Great Lakes and of Fort Sheridan, which the article said was probably doomed because it has an 18-hole golf course.

"Fort Sheridan is the headquarters for the 4th U.S. Army, responsible for the mobilization and training of 74,000 Army National Guard members and 54,000 U.S. Army reservists," Dixon wrote, putting the cost of moving the operation at $15 million.

Addressing Fort Sheridan's vulnerability, the golf course, Dixon said, "The golf course... is a recreational facility for the use of military families who live and work at Fort Sheridan. I know of no major military installation in this country that does not provide similar recreational facilities for the men and women who live and work on military posts."

Dixon, who serves on the Senate Armed Services Committee, dismissed the article's claim that the Great Lakes base would close, also putting the cost of that adjustment at about $22 million.

"That would be ridiculous. Great Lakes is the largest naval training center in the United States. Neither Oplando nor San Diego, the only alternatives to Great Lakes, can absorb the Great Lakes mission," Dixon said.

His response came Wednesday, a week after Congress empowered a 12-member commission to review all 3,800 domestic military bases and respond to the secretary of Defense within 45 days with a list of bases to close.

The commission, co-chaired by former Connecticut Democratic Sen. Abraham Ribicoff and former Alabama Republican Rep. Jack Edwards, was intended to take the thorny base closing issue out of the political arena and put it in the hands of a bipartisan panel of experts in military, environmental and business affairs.

Under the plan, Defense Secretary Frank Carlucci can approve or reject the commission's list, but a majority of Congress can override Carlucci's decision. Pres. Ronald Reagan, however, has the option to veto the outcome in Congress.

Both Dixon and Costello voted

The local installation may be closed.

Base plan flawed—Dixon

(Statement yesterday by U.S. Sen. Alan Dixon on the future of the Price Center, the former Army Depot) in Granite City:

The St. Louis area support center in Granite City is one of the installations that accounts for some of the 30,250 permanently assigned military personnel and 22,075 civilian personnel in Illinois.

Last Wednesday (Oct. 12) against my opposition, the Senate and House passed S. 2749, the military base closure bill.

Despite my profound respect and admiration for the chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, the distinguished senior senator from Georgia, Sam Nunn, and the ranking minority member, the senior senator from Virginia, John Warner, I voted against the bill.

While I supported the provisions related to the Defense Appropriations Act for fiscal year 1989 and the technical corrections to the 1989 National Defense Authorization Act, I could not support the provisions addressing the closure of military bases.

My opposition to this provision was well known.

I spoke against it when it was considered in committee, and led two days' worth of debate when it was considered by the Senate this spring.

Finally, I argued for changes when the conference met last week. While I am pleased that my colleagues did defer to me on several issues during these debates, I am still not satisfied this bill is in the best interest of the American people.

My abiding concern has been that the process by which bases are identified for closure be totally objective and nonpartisan.

I believe that all of the defense installations should be considered on those overseas as well as those in the United States.

This analysis must be done on a level playing field, one that does not tilt towards the preconceived notions and biases of the military services or the regional or political interests of one area or political party.

This will be a one-time opportunity to save potentially substantial sums of money. It is imperative that this study be done right, because there

District 9 negotiations continuing

GRANITE CITY — Negotiations between School District 9 and its employees are scheduled to resume at 4 p.m. today, board spokesman Terry Salem said.

Board negotiators will be meeting with the district's cooks and custodians today and with the Granite City Federation of Teachers Local 743 Secretary Council at 4 p.m. tomorrow.

Salem reports some progress with the secretaries and said he is hopeful that negotiations will wrap up soon.

"When you go through negotiations like this, you can get caught up on one or two issues that drag things out," he said. "I am hopeful that things will wind down soon."

A ratification vote by Local 743 teachers is to be held at the conclusion of the secretarial negotiations.

Teachers reached a tentative agreement with the board before voting Sept. 27 to end their strike.

Sans pit bulls, dog ordinance returns

GRANITE CITY — The long-awaited revised pit bull ordinance doesn't specifically include either pits or bulls.

The "vicious and dangerous" dog ordinance was placed on first reading by the aldermen Tuesday night. It will be the subject of a special open meeting of the Sanitation Committee at 5:30 p.m. Friday at City Hall.

The ordinance is designed to replace an ordinance that placed severe restrictions on pit bull owners. It was unanimously passed by the council, but never was put into effect because of strong public objections.

First Ward Alderman Casmer

Skubish, chairman of the Sanitation Committee, said the new ordinance reflects the expressed desires of the people who spoke at earlier council and special meetings — that the ordinance should not be breed-specific.

The new ordinance defines a vicious dog as:

- Any individual dog that when unprovoked inflicts bites or attacks a human being or other animals either on public or private property;
- Any individual dog with a known propensity, tendency or disposition to attack without provocation, to cause injury or to otherwise endanger the safety of human beings or domestic animals;
- Any individual dog which attacks a human being or domestic animal without provocation;
- Any individual dog which has been found to be a "dangerous dog" on three separate occasions.

The ordinance says no dog shall be deemed "vicious" if it bites, attacks, or menaces a trespasser on the property of its owner or harms or menaces anyone who has been tormented, abused, or if it is a dog professionally trained for law enforcement or guard duties.

A "dangerous dog" is defined as any individual dog which, when unprovoked, unleashed, or unattended by its owner or a member of its owner's family — in a vicious or terrorizing manner approaches any person in an apparent attitude of attack upon streets, sidewalks, or any public grounds or places.

Owners of vicious dogs as defined by the ordinance would have to meet special licensing and confinement requirements for their animals, including a certificate of insurance showing coverage of at least $50,000.

MADISON — Jeff Bridick, 21, a former football standout at Madison High School, was named a probationary patrolman Tuesday night by the City Council.

Bridick, who graduated from the high school in 1986, had been a dispatcher for the department. His father, Charlie Bridick, is the chief of police.

Charlie-Bridick said Jeff is the seventh member of the family to pursue a career in law enforcement.

His uncle, Don Bridick, is a captain in the Madison County Sheriff's Department and a former Madison police chief.

Jeff Bridick has four cousins in law enforcement.

He is currently attending the Granite City campus of Belleville Area College, majoring in law enforcement.

The appointment was made at the recommendation of the Board of Police Commissioners and takes effect Oct. 23.

Pontoon Beach de-annexes airfield

By Valerie Evenden
Staff writer

PONTPOON BEACH — Annexations have been the usual order of business at Village Board meetings. A de-annexation ordinance is a rarity, but it was enacted Tuesday night and the village shrank by 140 acres.

The former Lakeside Airport, now known as Nichols Airfield, on Illinois 111 opposite Horseshoe Lake State Park was de-annexed from the village by a unanimous vote of the trustees.

Bill Nichols, owner of the airfield property, objected to its annexation and has been pursuing litigation in the event the village would not de-annex the land.

A court hearing on the issue was scheduled for today and the trustees went into executive session to discuss the pending suit, prior to resuming the meeting and voting to de-annex the property.

Nichols, who attended the meeting, declined to discuss the case or say what future plans he has for the property. He cited the advice of his attorney.

Village Attorney Keith Jensen said Tuesday night that Jensen's court action involving the village and Nichols had not been dismissed and was expected to proceed.

De-annexation of the airport still allows the village boundaries to remain contiguous, retaining an additional 2,300 acres of other land annexed at the same time as the airfield, Jensen said.

An ordinance de-annexing the airport was prepared last October, but ran into a stumbling block when Nichols protested. Bruns Road on the eastern edge and School House Road on the south side of the airport remaining in the village.

The two roads still are in the village, and no protest was voiced Tuesday night.

I believe that the process which this bill affirms remains fatally flawed in several respects.

I do not believe that we have a level playing field, and I do not believe that the commission appointed by (Defense) Secretary Carlucci has sufficient time or resources to do a credible job. I would like to explain why I have drawn this conclusion.

First, the base closure and realignment commission is only now really getting into the analysis of the Defense Department's 3,806 major installations in the United States. And, not one of these 3,806 bases has been visited by the commission.

While I respect the expertise and the bipartisanship of the commission, I remain concerned that it fails to reflect the regional diversity of this country, or the interests of state and local government officials who have a vital stake in this matter.

I have likewise had concern regarding the competence and independence of the commission staff. As we all know, staff play an essential, sometimes controlling role in the deliberations of commissions and committees.

From the beginning, there was concern that the staff supporting the base closure and realignment commission would simply reflect the views of the military services; rather than providing an independent analysis. For this reason, the Senate bill directs that none of the staff be Department of Defense employees.

I was pleased that the House also expressed these concerns and mandated that no more than half of the senior staff be Defense Department employees during 1988.

The acceptance by the conferees of the House provisions suggests that even my colleagues who support this initiative share my concerns about the independence and nonpartisanship of the commission staff.

I am aware that Secretary

Carlucci and the commission co-chairman have been working to satisfy our concerns in this area.

I confess that I remain very concerned that the commission staff be equal to the formidable task before it, and that it provide the kind of independent, professional, and nonpartisan analysis which I believe every one of my colleagues supports and expects.

There was a great deal of concern that overseas bases be included in this analysis. Frankly, I would have preferred that the commission review both overseas and U.S. bases.

Commissioners are going to be asked to undergo significant economic and social upheaval through installation closures and realignments. I believe they have a right to expect that our bases overseas will receive the same scrutiny as those in Illinois, Alaska or Michigan.

I was pleased that we were able to amend the Senate bill to include an in-depth analysis of the overseas base infrastructure by the secretary of Defense in this process. This report has been ongoing and was due on Oct. 15 to both the commission and the House.

I am also pleased that the conferees supported the tougher Senate language which insisted that this study perform a rigorous scrub of our overseas bases — the same kind of analysis which the commission will perform on the U.S. bases.

Finally, I have a genuine concern whether we have provided the commission sufficient time to perform this difficult task. The commission was formed in late May and has held a few public hearings. However, its efforts have been slowed by the persistent doubt about whether enabling legislation could be enacted.

The commission's staff, with the exception of a few Department of Defense employees who were loaned to it, has been very slow in recruiting the kind of top level, independent resources essential to this task.

By mandating the completion of the commission's work by the end of this year, I believe we are asking for exactly the kind of product which we are all trying to avoid.

The reality is that the short time left to the commission after enactment of this legislation will almost certainly lead to a rubber stamp of the military services' closure recommendations, rather than an unbiased, independent analysis.

This is the reality of the situation, and I believe every member needs to understand it when he or she votes on this measure.

I argued hard in conference that the commission's mandate be extended until June 30, 1989, instead of Dec. 31, 1988. I felt that this adjustment would give the process an even chance of doing what we all profess we want — thorough an independent review.

Many of my colleagues argued against this idea, saying it was better for the outgoing Administration to make this kind of hard decision. I take the contrary view.

I want the Administration which will have to implement these closures to have a role in agreeing to the list.

I also want the commission to have the benefit of the new Administration's views on military force structure, and force deployment. I regret that this bill was not accepted by the commission.

We would need to close military bases even if we were not facing huge federal budget deficits. We simply have more bases than we need.

I do not believe that this commission, however, can give the kind of independent, well-thought-out base closing list that the public interest and our national security interests demand. For these reasons, I was forced to vote no on the conference report.

8 circuit judgeships on ballot

By Bill Winter

Circuit Judge Paul E. Riley is opposed Nov. 8 for election to the Judge William Johnson position on the 3rd Circuit Court in the Illinois Supreme Court.

Moving up to a brand-new circuit judgeship is another unopposed candidate, Associate Judge Charles V. Rarik Jr.

And six circuit judges are seeking retention in office for new terms. Retention is sought without a ballot opponent. The six are:

"Horace L. Calvo, Glen Carbon, formerly of Granite City. He is serving by appointment as a 5th Judicial District appellate judge, and is the Democratic nominee for the 5th District seat (now held by Justice Joseph Goldenhersh) on the Illinois Supreme Court.

"Charles W. 'Bill' Chapman, Edwardsville, a former Granite City resident. He is the Democratic nominee for the Judge John Karns position on the Appellate Court.

"Philip J. Rarik, Troy, the Democratic nominee for one of two new 5th District appellate judgeships.

"George J. Moran Jr., Granite City, seeking to remain a 3rd Circuit judge.

"Paul J. O'Neill, Alton, chief circuit judge, running for a new term as a 3rd Circuit judge.

"John L. DeLaurenti, Bond County, seeking to remain a 3rd Circuit judge.

Judge Riley, a resident of Edwardsville, was appointed as an associate judge in August 1986. He has served as an appointed circuit judge in 1987 and 1988. He has 20 years of trial experience, including 19 years as a public defender. Riley is a life-long resident of Madison County. Judge Rarik, also of Edwardsville, has served as an associate judge in the 3rd Circuit since January 1983. Previously, he was Bond County state's attorney and then assistant Madison County state's attorney.

against the bill, even though the measure sailed through the Senate, 92-7, and the House, 303-1. Rep. Les Aspin, a Wisconsin Democrat who is chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, said base closings could save the Pentagon between $2 billion and $3 billion annually. Costello said that while he agreed with the general concept of the bill, he said that overseas bases should have been included because unneeded foreign bases will be kept going at the possible expense of domestic bases like the Granite City center.

"I took some heat for my vote. Some people said I was only considering the interests of my congressional district. I let them know that I will protect those interests anytime they are threatened," Costello said in a prepared statement.

8 vying for 4 appellate judgeships

the candidates. Both were recommended by lawyers.

CHAPMAN/KEENAN. Chapman, of Edwardsville, a former Granite City resident, is a former state trial judge in the United States in 1984 by the Association of Trial Lawyers of America.

A Madison County circuit judge since 1979, he teaches law at the St. Louis University Law School and speaks at annual seminars for judges and attorneys. In the March 1988 primary, he upset the candidate backed by the regular Democratic organization.

Chapman says judges are obligated to serve the entire district and should be chosen on the basis of ability. Keenan, of Mount Carmel, has been a judge in the judicial system and teaches real estate law at Wabash Valley Community College.

In past years, he was an assistant Illinois attorney general and city attorney of Mount Carmel. Keenan says Metro-East has dominated the 5th Appellate judgeships over the past two decades, except for the position held by Rarik.

HOWERTON/EVERS. Howerton, of Carterville, is a nine-year Jackson County circuit judge. Previously, he served eight years as Williamson County state's attorney. He has lectured for a number of legal groups and has taught at the Southern Illinois University at Carbondale School of Law and the State's Attorneys' Legal Training Commission on Trial Advocacy.

An editor of the Criminal Justice Newsletter of the Illinois State Bar, he has written for Litigation magazine of the American Bar Association.

Howerton has emphasized the wide variety of judicial cases he has handled. He also served as a special prosecutor and as public defender.

During the campaign, Lowery has stressed that rural areas of the district need more representation on the appellate bench.

Rarik replies that he is familiar with rural issues and values. Rarik sums up by saying his candidacy is based on legal ability, experience, integrity and commitment to public service.

GOLDENHERSH/LOWERY. Goldenhersh, of Belleville, is a St. Clair County circuit judge. He was an associate judge seven years before joining the circuit bench in 1982.

The son of retiring Illinois Supreme Court Justice Joseph Goldenhersh, he declined to debate his Nov. 8 opponent, citing rules that prevent judicial candidates from discussing how they would decide specific cases.

Long, of Godfrey, heads the Madison County Republican Party. The Illinois Supreme Court rejected a challenge of his dual role as a judicial candidate and a party leader. If elected to the appellate court post, he plans to resign the Republican Central Committee office.

He has criticized his opponent for having close ties to Democratic politicians, and has assailed Goldenhersh for presiding over the longest trial in U.S. history. Evidence was presented to St. Clair County jurors for three and a half years on alleged dioxin contamination. Goldenhersh says he conducted the case properly.

Glik's stores—Thriving after a century of quality shopping

Bob Glik shared the history of the Glik family and the local Glik's store chain at the October meeting of the Old Six Mile Historical Society.

Bob's great-grandfather, Joseph Glik, came to America during the 1880s and peddled pots, pans and clothing to merchants in rural Missouri for over a decade.

He then settled in St. Louis and worked as a salesman for Simon Epstein, who operated a clothing store at 2221 N. Broadway.

Records show he operated a store on North Broadway until his death in 1910.

Customers from Granite City, Madison and Venice found the North Broadway stores convenient to the ferry landing in Venice as they traveled to and from jobs in St. Louis across the Mississippi River.

When Bob's grandfather, Morris Glik, graduated from high school in 1901, his father urged him to open a store in Madison. He did just that, and it was known as the "Good Luck Store" after the German word "gluck," from which the family name is derived.

Bob Glik

Morris changed the store's name to "The Boston Store" and later to Glik's.

This store was located on Third Street, Madison, and was a 2,000-square-foot building.

Morris and his wife, the former Elsie Strauss, would occasionally help in the store. In 1925, they moved to larger quarters in the 500 block of Madison Avenue and became a full department store. Morris Glik died in 1945 and she managed the store until their son, Joe, returned from wartime service.

Its location, meanwhile, had returned to Third Street, the corner of Third and Madison.

When shopping centers became popular in the mid-1950s, Bob's father, Joseph Glik, opened a store in Bellemore Village, Granite City, now the corporate headquarters.

Its success led to the opening of other stores in Madison and St. Clair counties. In the early 1980s the decision was made to lease stores in shopping malls, the first being a Glik's Ltd. store for women in St. Clair Square.

There are now 24 stores in a 100-mile radius of St. Louis. Joseph Glik's sons, Bob, Jeff and Jim, are the fourth generation in the business.

Many shoppers, especially in the Missouri stores, may think that the firm has corporate roots in New York or some large eastern city. But it is a privately held company, still a "family business," with its beginnings right here, the speaker said.

21st candidates to debate at SIUE

The candidates for U.S. representative from the 21st District of Illinois in the Nov. 8 election will be matched in a public debate at Southern Illinois University at Edwardsville on Wednesday at 7:30 p.m.

The debate will be in the Meridian Ballroom of the University Center.

The candidates are Rep. Jerry Costello, a Belleville Democrat elected to fill the unexpired term of the late Rep. Melvin Price, D-Belleville, and Robert Gaffner, a Republican from Greenville.

The debate is being sponsored by the university's department of political science, the Edwardsville Area League of Women Voters, and the Edwardsville Intelligencer.

Moderator for the debate will be Rosemarie Archangel, acting associate provost, who is on leave as dean of Graduate Studies and Research.

The most satisfying and fulfilling experience is that of serving God. The knowledge that we are doing something for Him fills a need within us that nothing else in the world can.

We were created by Him for His good pleasure. It is God's desire to have fellowship with us. He is most pleased when we are close to us.

One of the outstanding characteristics of a Christian is his joy. He is happy inside and it shows outside. He serves God with gladness.

The world according to ... Gabby

By Andy Slering
Staff writer

GRANITE CITY — You get a nickname like "Gabby" for one of two reasons: You never talk at all — the same logic that dubs 300-pounders "Tiny." Or else you never stop talking.

Glen "Gabby" Eddleman never stops.

He scatters words like billiard balls exploded from the rack by a sledgehammer break. He talks about the origin of his nickname, his kids, his ex-wife, how nice the weather is.

He talks about his love for the game of pool.

He just plain talks. As a reporter discovered, trying to write it all down is an exercise in futility and an invitation to hand cramps.

Eddleman, 59, is the founder of the Terry Eddleman Memorial Pool League, now in its 11th year. Originally the Twin State Billiards League, the local league's name was changed after its second year when Gabby's son, Terry, was killed in a car crash in Iowa.

Growing up in the tiny town of Birdspoint, Mo., just above the Missouri Bootheel, Gabby was 16 when he was introduced to pool one summer by his grandfather.

He had a natural eye and feel and soon outgrew his granddad's tutelage.

He sought higher pool education, which he found at the hands of a local shark named Junior Meyers.

Eddleman would pick cotton all day and take his 50 cents to wouldn't let me count the money."

The duo only had one loser that summer, at the hands of a sharper called "Detroit Whitey," who beat Gabby to the tune of several C-notes. Bill wanted Gabby to try Whitey again, but Gabby was already learning the most valuable lesson of the hustler's trade.

"I told him I couldn't beat the guy," he said.

"What gets you in trouble is when you think you're better at something than you really are."

It was the only loss they suffered that summer. "Course, I didn't run into the best," he said modestly. "But you get used to playing for money, so's I don't bother you."

Lots of people can shoot for fun. Money tells the truth.

At the end of the summer, the pair divvied up $2,000 — big money in 1950 and a lot more money than could be made at just about any table in the Bootheel. Gabby went into the service, and when he got out he made plans to hit the hustling road again. He had just about raised a gambling stake when he met his future wife, Mary Lou.

That was the end of his full-time hustling career.

The couple married and moved to Granite City, where he found work at Granite City Steel.

They raised a family — three boys, all grown now.

Gabby still works at the steel mill, as a clerk, but he and Mary Lou divorced after 21 years of marriage. His grown sons, Mark and Robert, live with the pool hall, where Meyers would play him 10 games at a nickel a game, quickly squandering the aspiring Mosconi from his earnings.

But not for long. Soon the student was giving the teacher a few lessons.

"My grandfather and Junior both told me I caught on faster than anybody they ever saw," he said. His slightly gravelly voice retains a twangy residue of the Bootheel. He has that lean, rawhide body type, too, so common in the Bootheel and the Ozarks.

Playing with his own hard-earned cash taught him a lesson applicable to a wider world than that contained within the shadowy confines of a pool hall.

"If you're paying your own money, you learn a lot quicker."

At age 20, Gabby took his game on the road — against the strongly worded advice of his father, who took the boring, if sensible, view that hustling pool was not a way to spend one's life.

He traveled through the Midwest with a fellow whose name he remembers only as "Bill." Bill financed the trip and the wagers, splitting the take 60-40 with Gabby.

Bill kept the money in an old cigar box in the trunk of their car. The cash pile grew steadily that summer. "Bill was very superstitious," Gabby said. "He him, and the inside of the single-story house on Maryville Road has the easy, casual look of a bachelor pad. It's not messy, exactly, but little things like the overflowing wastebasket in the bathroom and the shaving equipment on the sink betray the absence of a female hand.

From the way Gabby describes it, Mary Lou just plain got tired of his working the second shift, then putting in another eight hours hustling pool at Scovill's or some other all-night joint.

"But she never said nothing about it. At least she never worried about me. She knew if I wasn't home, I was either working or in a pool room."

"We're still good friends," he added. "She still drops by and picks up the place."

Gabby started the Granite City pool league in 1977 at the suggestion of his son, Terry, so it's appropriate that it would eventually bear Terry's name.

Terry was living in Iowa at the time and had invited his Dad up for the playoffs of a pool league there.

"When Terry first mentioned it, I laughed," Gabby said. "Ain't nobody will want to play in it, I told him."

How wrong a man can be. That first year, the league had 11 teams; the next it had 24. Today it has 121 teams with about 1,200 players in eight men's divisions and five women's divisions. The league has winter and summer sessions, with trophies awarded in each division and session. The matches are played at 37 participating taverns. The annual banquet draws up to 400 revelers.

A while back, Gabby met the editor of a pool magazine at a tournament in Las Vegas. He later wrote the man, asking for advice on how to improve the league.

Gabby said the man wrote back, "You don't need any advice. You already got your brains in."

"I never dreamed it would get this big," he said, reaching for a Camel. He would reach for a cigarette several more times during the interview, but he never quite managed to light one. Too busy talking, you understand.

It was in 1981, between the league's second and third years, that Terry Eddleman got killed. Ron Davis, league president then and now, proposed the name change.

"Terry loved to shoot pool," Gabby said.

Things like that have established Gabby's reputation around the bi-state area — established it too well for his liking. He said he has trouble finding a money game locally without having to spot an opponent a bunch of balls, though he claims his game has deteriorated considerably since he started wearing glasses four years ago.

"There's probably 15 guys in the league" as good or better than me now," he said.

Is that modesty or a hustle? To find out would probably cost some cash.

... about that nickname. Eddleman laughed as he recalled how the late Roy Hefflin, an engineer at the steel mill, stuck him with it 28 years ago. Gabby was telling a story one day:

"Roy butted in, and I told him I was a mind. He butted in again, and I told him he was rude, and kept talking. Finally, he said, 'Dammit, Gabby, shut up and let me talk for a while!'"

It is not recorded anywhere whether Gabby Eddleman complied with the request. It is unlikely.

Lost In This Space

The world is watching

To see ourselves as others see us is often embarrassing but occasionally edifying. I watched a Public Broadcasting show Monday that sampled the opinions of citizens of other countries about our presidential race.

The rest of the world has more than a passing interest in who will lead the United States for the next four years. Japan, Russia, Latin America, our allies in Western Europe — all are intensely interested, for their futures will be affected by U.S. policies.

In Japan, leaders apparently are for George Bush almost 100 percent because of his statements about free trade. Any closure of American markets to Japanese products would play hell with the Japanese economy.

The Japanese man-in-the-street tends to look with envy on American politics. In Japan, most of the political action is behind the closed doors of the all-powerful Conservative Liberal Democrats. So the vote in Japan doesn't mean a whole lot. Voters there expressed amazement that Americans can take the right to vote so casually that fewer than 55 percent of the eligible voters will even bother.

This was a frequent theme in other countries, too. Europeans are interested from the standpoint of their security. They would love to have a say on who will lead the Free World for the next four years, who will sit down at the table with Mikhail Gorbachev. The Russian bear doesn't growl like it used to, but a great many Europeans trust it less than ever as it makes like an almost cuddly Teddy Bear.

Not surprisingly, Europeans are struck by the element of the absurd and banal in our politics. Channel 5 in France — sent a crew to the Democratic convention. A camera in the control room caught the applause and demonstrations on the convention floor. For some reason, the producer kept shouting one particular instruction, which was relayed to the various whips stationed on the floor.

"Red signs down! Blue signs up!" Was he afraid the red signs would elicit "pinkie" connotations in the minds of viewers? Or did he just think red was tacky? Whatever. Down went the red signs.

An Italian commentator waxed pompous about candidates who appear to be "remote-controlled puppets" out of touch with the "common man." If I were Italian, I wouldn't look down my Roman nose at anybody. At least we don't have an acknowledged former prostitute and porn star in Congress like they do in their parliament. That's common.

In Austria, a TV commentator opined that the conventions have "nothing to do with rational political thought." It was easy to imagine Chancellor Kurt Waldheim, a almost universally shunned by polls here when his Nazi past was revealed, cackling about the background.

In Russia, a woman liked Dukakis because he was "good-looking" and "sensible." A Russian military officer liked Bush; he thought Bush would build on Reagan's and Gorbachev's peace accords and thus represented "stability."

Russians are big on stability. You would be, too, if the U.S. had undergone the turmoil of a revolution and then lost 20 million soldiers in World War II.

The show offered a glimpse of glasnost in operation. A Soviet TV commentator related a joke popular since Josef Stalin's day: "In Russia, we have freedom of speech. In the United States, you have freedom after you speak."

It was sometimes astonishing how well informed people on the streets were about our political process. It made me stop and think that perhaps we hold our position of pre-eminence in the world through sheer blind luck, through an accident of geography and history. Not exactly a comforting thought.

Some clearly are fed a careful diet of government propaganda about us. In Nicaragua, the statements by one man clearly indicated that he thought the poor and minorities were systematically excluded from voting here.

The truth is, of course, much more damning. Many of them, and many of the middle class, too, will not bother to vote for The Leader of the Free World.

Which is weird when you realize how people in other lands would jump at the chance to vote in our elections. The fate of the world is a common fate. To paraphrase John Donne, no country is an island.

Just ask Grenada. And it really is an island.

It is not recorded anywhere whether Gabby Eddleman complied with the request. It is unlikely.

"I told him one time, 'No wonder they call you Gabby' — who'd want to walk around with a name like Rudolph Wanderone!" he said, putting humorous vocal English on the name.

THE LAW AND YOU
BY RICK REED
Attorney At Law

People involved in a personal injury claim sometimes name more than one defendant in the lawsuit. If they settle with one of the parties, the question then arises as to whether that also releases the other party as well. Illinois law now provides that when a release is given to one person, it does not discharge any other person from liability for the injury unless the release itself specifically provides for releasing others. Thus, the language of the release itself is controlling in these situations.

In one recent case, the plaintiff fell on ice and sustained a fractured arm and leg. She was treated by a physician for those injuries, and she later filed suit against the property owner for negligently maintaining the property and the doctor for malpractice. She subsequently settled with the property owner and signed a document which released "all other persons" from any and all claims arising out of or from the accident. The question arose as to whether the signing of this release with the property owner released the physician from the case against the physician.

For the physician to prevail in this matter, negligent treatment merely aggravated the original injury instead of resulting in a new and separate injury. Under Illinois law, the property owner would be liable for both the original injury and any aggravation of that injury caused by a physician's negligent treatment. If the injured party could not release the physician, the second thing the physician would have to demonstrate in order to have the case against him dismissed would be that the release signed by the plaintiff had language which would be sufficient to release all parties named in the original lawsuit.

In this particular case, the Appellate Court determined that the same fractured leg bone was affected by both the doctor's alleged negligence and the original property owner's act. Thus, the physician's alleged negligent treatment merely aggravated the original injury. There was not a new and separate injury created by the physician's alleged malpractice. With regard to the release language, the language was general enough to release both the property owner and the doctor. Therefore, when the plaintiff signed the release in settlement of the case against the property owner, she also released the physician.

Mother, daughter share teaching profession, honors

By Nicole Vaughn
Staff writer

GRANITE CITY — When Helen Hall became a teacher 17 years ago, she followed in the footsteps of her mother, Jean Hall, and her mother's mother.

Helen and Jean Hall had always been close, doing many of the things together that other mothers and daughters do.

They would shop together, visit the St. Louis Zoo or Art Museum or just spend time together. But neither one ever thought they would be honored together for the profession they share.

Mother and daughter both appeared in the 1988-89 Who's Who in American Education.

A Granite City teacher for 30 years, Jean Hall retired at the end of last school year. Her career began at Mitchell School and led her through almost all the area elementary schools. She taught remedial reading.

During the last years of her career, Jean served as language arts supervisor for District 9.

Jean Hall was surprised by the honor, but not surprised that her daughter received it as well.

"It's always a thrill to be honored," she said of her own recognition. "It never occurred to me that we could enjoy this together, but I'm not surprised — Helen is outstanding in her field."

Jean Hall cracked a smile that only proud mothers can. Unlike her mother, Helen was surprised. "I certainly didn't expect it, but I think it's quite an honor," she said.

Like her mother, Helen began her career as a remedial teacher in Granite City. What she taught, however, was a combination of both parents' occupations. "Dad was an accountant and mom taught remedial reading, so I guess I combined the best of both worlds by teaching remedial math," she said.

Helen taught for 11 years in Granite City, at Logan and Prather Elementary Schools, before she was laid off in 1982.

"It was very disappointing," Helen said, "but I was fortunate enough to get another Chapter 1 position."

Now an Edwardsville resident, she has taught at Edwardsville Junior High School for almost six years.

Working with children with learning disorders has been a rewarding experience for mother and daughter alike.

"It's real rewarding to see them spark up and become a part of the class," Helen said of her math students.

"When the children haven't been able to learn and then they start learning, you feel like you had a part in that," Jean said.

Helen said her mother provided a positive influence in her decision to become a teacher.

"I saw how important schooling can be and the personal satisfaction gained from instilling the desire to learn," she said. Jean also has very positive advice to offer new or future teachers.

"You can't control the number of students you have or the money that the schools handle," Jean said. "But you can control the child's experience — make it a happy experience."

Although she still has many concerns about the teaching profession, Jean said she particularly enjoyed being able to sit out of the recent teacher's strike.

"I was teaching and active during many of the strikes, but I spectored this one," Jean said.

"When you're retired, that's the only position to be in," But Jean's retirement hasn't quelled her concerns.

"There is never enough money to provide everything for the schools," Jean said.

She said she wants to see politicians get into office who will "see that schools get the money they need to run properly."

If it sounds like she is preoccupied with money, she's not. Jean is more concerned with the value of the education that students receive.

"There should be enough money to give every child his maximum chance to learn everything he can," she said.

Jean Hall

Like her mother, Helen is also concerned about money but more concerned about students keeping up with the technological advances of the computer age.

"We're going from a society where students are being trained for one profession," Helen said.

"We need to create more flexible students, able to do several jobs. We need to make more problem-solvers who can keep up with the technology of today's society."

With more than 40 years of teaching between them, the Halls have no regrets about their chosen profession.

"Teachers are more influential than most people think," Jean said. "Helping children to grow up right is something to be proud of. Of course, I was always so busy, I didn't have the time to think 'Aw, shoot! I wish I'd been a secretary.'"

Helen said she thought about other careers. She has a pilot's license and an aviation career once seemed attractive as did a career in the business field.

"I thought about them," Helen said. "I think everyone examines all their options, but that's not where I belong. I am right where I belong."

The three-generation tradition may be coming to an end, at least in the family tree.

"I don't have any children and I don't think my dogs will be able to continue it," Helen said and laughed. "I do hope to continue it though, maybe not through the bloodline, but to one of my students by being a good teacher."

3 board members unopposed

By Bill Winter
Staff writer

From a candidate's standpoint, the best way to run is without opposition.

The three local Madison County Board members with four-year terms ending have the luxury of running Nov. 8 with no opponents. No Republicans filed.

Democrat Herbert "Junior" Milton, 57, 2219 Washington Ave., also was unopposed in the March primary election in Board District 22.

Primary races were won by two other Democratic incumbents — Don Garrett, 54, 401 W. Second St., Madison, in District 23 and Frank Dutko, 60, 1808 Fourth St., Madison, in District 24.

Milton was elected to the County Board in 1972 and again in 1976 and 1980. Due to redistricting, he also appeared on the ballot, and won, in both 1982 and 1984.

In 1982, Milton was elected chairman of the Illinois Association of County Board Members, part of the Illinois Association of County Officials.

A longtime Granite City Steel employee, he has resided in the same district for 40 years.

Often leading the County Board's contract negotiations with county employees, Milton has been active in expanding county office and court space, modernizing the county nursing home, improving roads, supporting law enforcement programs, expanding services to the elderly, and encouraging development of new residential and recreation areas.

Garrett is seeking his second four-year term on the County Board. He served as a Madison city alderman from 1975 until 1986, and as a Madison school board member from 1977 to 1987.

He is executive director of Don Garrett Associates, a promotions, consulting and public relations company.

Garrett has cited jobs and economic development as major issues. He helped approve a county loan that enabled A.O. Smith Corp. to reopen its auto components plant in Granite City.

His objectives include expanded job training, Venice riverfront development and new boundaries for District 23. He adds, "I will be involved in efforts to modernize the McKinley Bridge," which connects Venice and St. Louis.

Dutko, a Granite City Steel security guard, seeks a third four-year board term. He served as Madison police chief from 1970 to 1977, having joined the police department in 1950.

A World War II veteran, he served as a Madison alderman before joining the County Board in 1980.

Chairman of the License and Liquor Committee, Dutko also has participated in County Board committee work on personnel, rights of way and sewers.

A Madisonian 55 years, he advocates "service to the people in District 24, sound county governmental financing, and fair treatment of all the people in the county."

Haine unopposed as state's attorney

William R. "Bill" Haine, 43, Alton, a 10-year Madison County Board member and chairman of the Madison County Transit District since 1981, is likely to be the county's next state's attorney.

William Haine

He defeated incumbent State's Attorney Dick Allen in the Democratic primary. Republican candidate Don Weber, the elected prosecutor in 1981-84, withdrew from the Nov. 8, 1988, ballot.

A former assistant public defender, Haine has had a private law practice in Wood River since 1978. He pledges less reliance on plea-bargaining with criminal suspects and says,

"The Madison County criminal justice system is going to be taken seriously."

Haine is working with Allen "to ensure a smooth transition."

"I've talked to most of the people in the office, and I've also interviewed several lawyers to work in the office."

He has been working on a budget proposal and comments, "The office needs more resources."

Coroner unopposed

There is no opposition on the Nov. 8 ballot for Madison County Coroner Dallas M. Burke, 61, Alton, Democratic nominee for a fifth consecutive four-year term.

Her late husband, Thomas Burke, was nominated for coroner in the spring of 1972 but died before the general election. She won the office then and also was elected in 1976-80-84.

Mrs. Burke has continued operation of the family's funeral home. A registered nurse, she has three daughters, two sons and 13 grandchildren.

Her office is responsible for determining the manner and cause of deaths occurring in the county.

In her successful March 1988 primary campaign, she said she has worked effectively with prosecu-

Dallas Burke

utors and police agencies and has kept pace with changes in investigative procedures.

Portell seeks 8th term

Willard V. "Butch" Portell, as usual, is unopposed for election to another four-year term as circuit court clerk in Madison County.

Portell, 71, of No. 1 Tanglewood, Collinsville, is on the Nov. 8 ballot, seeking an eighth consecutive four-year term. A Democrat, the former Granite City has 36 years of county governmental experience.

He praises his staff as "experienced, efficient, courteous and hard-working."

He actively oversees such divisions as traffic, bonding, criminal records, family, child support, divorce, mental health, felony, juvenile and probate records.

Portell is a bachelor. A former athlete, he numbers among his close friends Baseball Cardinals Manager Whitey Herzog.

Past president of the Illinois Court Clerks Association, he also has been active in the National Association of Court Administrators and the International Association of County Officials.

He comments that he has a hard time remembering the last time he was opposed in a general election. Instead of being rejected, he says he thinks of it more as being rehired.

"I get a lot of support from both sides," he says. "We have a good staff and we work as a team."

When bricks flake, even used bricks, the problem is more often moisture getting in where mortar is missing than through the bricks themselves. Tuckpointing is recommended.

Watch Pontoon growth

The inevitable has come to Pontoon Beach, and only wise moves now will guarantee a smooth future.

The unavoidable is growth, booming growth, unlike anything seen in this region for many years. The 25-year-old community is no longer considered just a stopover for fishing on the way elsewhere. Today, it is host to residential and business growth that are the envy of many neighboring towns.

Pontoon — once called Jones Park or Long Lake — began as a half-mile square incorporated village in 1963. Today, it has 15 square miles and room for expansion. The largest single chunk of annexation took place in June 1986, when the village added 2,400 acres, doubling its size.

This all spells wonderful news for village coffers, but it will also spell headaches without the proper checks being put into place. Those include zoning, traffic flow and business developmental guidelines. Pontoon officials should not be satisfied with laws on the books, but should constantly be looking for ways to improve them.

The finish of Interstate 255 excited officials a few months ago. Developers continue to pound on the doors and seem to be breaking new ground daily. Note the Chouteau Trace development as leading the way in the Interstate 270 area. Our guess is that by 1990 motorists will realize that the village limits no longer start at Pontoon Road and Illinois 111, but a couple of miles away.

Congratulations, Pontoon Beach. Here's one to grow on.

Support student overpass

In these days of financial limitations for all taxing bodies, Granite City Unit 9 School District would do well to listen to the pleas of one of its board members and prioritize its budget to help finance an overpass next to the high school.

Board member Roy Koberna said expedient action is needed to gain state-funded support of such an overpass, which would be built from the high school across Nameoki Road to Jill Avenue. Cost estimates range up to $250,000, but the district's share could be sliced somewhat if the project could be tied to upcoming IDOT having a person actually struck at the questioned intersection would lend credence to the plan. However, four students have been reported struck within a block of the location in the last two years, and we have to wonder if those incidents would have occurred had an overpass been in place. If we're waiting for someone to actually get hit at the Jill intersection, we may as well have an ambulance on standby.

A crosswalk and stoplights are utilized to some degree by the students, but as with all road signage, the rules are largely ignored, according to Koberna. Educating students would seem to be a priority, though high school students — like many pedestrians young and old — never let the rules sink in. Should they be penalized for human foibles? We think not.

We have to appreciate Koberna's attitude. As a Granite City police officer, he has a perspective that an average school board member would not. He knows the history of the problem and should be taken seriously.

Nameoki Road is now one of the most traveled thoroughfares in the area, and the future paints an even busier scenario. Proper planning at this time will circumvent the accident — the tragedy that is likely to happen without it.

Gold medal for citizenship

Guest comment by U.S. Sen. Paul Simon:

Jackie Joyner-Kersey, winner of two gold medals at the Olympics in Seoul, is being called the world's greatest female athlete, but she is doing something even more important. She deserves a gold medal for citizenship.

When she entered the stadium in Seoul for the closing ceremonies on the shoulders of her husband, Bob Kersey, she carried a sign: "I Love East St. Louis, Illinois."

Today, East St. Louis is a city of devastation, crime, unpaid city employees, intense poverty, but also a city with marvelous people. It is a city that many have fled and forgotten.

Jackie Joyner-Kersey wants to return to reopen the Mary E. Brown Community Center where she ran her first track meet at age 9 and where she long-jumped 16 feet 9 inches at age 12. Her gold medal winning jump in Seoul was 24 feet 3 1/2 inches. She has signed a sponsorship contract with Seven-Up to help fund a foundation to reopen the center for young athletes.

Jackie, 26, grew up in poverty. She remembers her mother telling her, "Make sure you finish school." Jackie graduated from UCLA with scholastic honors and in the top 10 percent of her class. Her mother died of meningitis in 1981 at age 38 but Jackie feels her mother is with her in spirit.

Says Jackie, "I have this burning desire to get out there and do my best. It's as if I'm keeping it all in a little bottle, and it's all going to come out when I do the best I'm capable of doing."

East St. Louis has so much potential, and the people there have so much potential.

The former U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, Donald McHenry, grew up in East St. Louis and has done much to help that city.

Katherine Dunham, the ballet and dance pioneer who received the Albert Schweitzer Music Award, grew up in East St. Louis and still maintains a home there. She has also done much to stimulate young people to take an interest in culture and in their African-American heritage.

Jackie Joyner-Kersey is a great athlete. But she is an even greater person for remembering her roots and for striving to see that more of the talented young people in that depressed city have a chance.

America is one family. When anyone in that family hurts, ultimately all of us hurt.

People in East St. Louis are hurting and Jackie Joyner-Kersey wants to help heal the wounds. She needs to be joined by public policy that does the same.

Trucks destroy Madison streets

To the editor:

I am writing in regard to the heavy trucks that are destroying our streets in East Madison, streets with five-ton load limits.

There is a truck route for these trucks, and I know the drivers do not drive down our streets on purpose. These drivers do not know where to go. They need a few signs along Route 203 to direct them.

I have asked Madison city officials for help with direction signs, with no results. It's their industrial park the trucks do business with. I have asked Nameoki Township officials to work with Madison, but both have given us isolated voters nothing.

This winter when we have a freeze and a few thaws the streets will crumble. Then the township will say to the taxpayers and voters: "We don't have the money to fix them."

All we need is a few signs. If they don't have the funds, I'll pay for them.

We are guilty of fearing, loving

To the editor:

We, the people of Granite City, confess. We are guilty of loving our children in the first degree.

Guilty of fearing a disease that's killing thousands every day.

Guilty of not understanding something that doctors all over the world can't find a cure for.

Guilty that the ones we loved best may be destroyed.

Guilty of fearing a disease that may wipe out our future generations.

We, the people of Granite City, plead guilty in the first degree...of loving our children.

Would the man or woman who has the answers, and the cure, please step forward and pronounce our sentence?

We, the people of Granite City...

Drugs costing us billions, lives

To the editor:

Everyone agrees that one of the major concerns in the U.S. is the illegal drug problem.

Drug abuse is reported from the poorest slums to the White House. Every segment of society is affected, from the poorest unborn child to people of great wealth and in high places.

According to recent statistics eight out of 10 school children have tried drugs.

Murders are committed daily in criminal circles in their fight to control import and sale of illegal drugs. No concern is given for innocent bystanders young or old if they might be present when the drug lords open combat. In many cities there are daily incidents of murders, and when investigated it is found they are drug related.

Everything indicates that in the past eight years, law enforcement agencies have been losing the battle against illegal drugs. For the present administration, Vice Pres. Bush has been head of Mr. Reagan's war on drugs. He has stated that Panamanian drug lord Noriega has been "brought to justice." Noriega, however, is still a free man and continues to rule Panama. How many more Americans will get hooked on drugs or die as a result of his activities, while he is being punished by the vice president's form of justice? It has been documented that the administration offered Noriega a deal to drop all charges if he would just leave Panama, drug millions included.

Mr. Bush says Gov. Dukakis is soft on crime because a murderer slipped through the Massachusetts parole system. How many murderers were committed by the drug pushers while Mr. Bush was in charge?

How many children and adults have had their lives devastated? How many billions has it cost our society with people on drugs who could not perform their work properly and safely? People have died in air crashes, train wrecks and countless traffic accidents. No one is really safe at home, in school, on the job, in public or wherever we might be. We all can't have FBI protection.

Where has been the greater failure? Gov. Dukakis' chance release of a murderer who killed again or the failure of the administration's drug policy headed by Vice Pres. Bush?

Abortion results in destruction

To the editor:

One of the truly great men in our Land in olden times was a man by the name of Thomas Jefferson. He wrote this: "The care of human life and happiness and not their destruction is the first and only object of good government."

Abortion kills. It is the destruction of human life. It is not good government. An election is coming up. Michael Dukakis is pro-abortion. Thomas Jefferson would not vote for him.

What this town needs is a castle

Never one to hide my feelings, I find myself this week forced to address the one shortcoming I've found in Granite City since arriving on the job a month ago.

No White Castles. That's right, White Castles. You know, those little burgers that have developed something of a cult following in St. Louis and other metropolitan cities.

There's nothing quite like a White Castle: squished to unbelievable flatness, topped with one measly dill pickle, covered with onion dots and traces of mustard and ketchup. That description might give some people shudders, but for me, it's the answer to perfection. Second to none. Far excellence. Mac Tonight can go jump.

White Castles don't cost much, either. That might be the most important part, when your cheap like I am.

You don't have to go too far to find the familiar white-block palaces. Fairview Heights has got one. Closer is Broadway's location in St. Louis, but the neighborhood is less savory than the sandwiches.

Granite City, however, fell down somewhere. Why couldn't a town that has a whole neighborhood devoted to fast food and room for one lousy White Castle? It's almost criminal.

I'll admit, though, that anything that comes in a near-microscopic package doesn't appear too appealing. In fact, it almost doesn't appear, period.

And, if the idea of ordering 52 burgers at a clip doesn't sound too attractive, take heart in the fact that you can always cut that order in half and get onion rings on the side. We may still look like pigs, but, hey, we're White Castle eaters. We don't care.

I'm not a loner; I'll bet there are a few other loyalists willing to take a stand, if encouraged. Together, we could make a difference. Let's fight for the burger in the square box.

And, oh yes, Make mine with cheese.

Have televised debates swayed your decision?

Have you decided which presidential candidate you are going to vote for in November and have the televised debates between Vice Pres. George Bush and Gov. Michael Dukakis had any effect on your decision?

Joe Crawley,

"I know who I'm going to vote for, the Democrat ticket. But he (Dukakis) isn't going to get it. I saw (the debates). I don't think the debates do any good. A man already has his mind made up."

Savings-loans still ailing

PRU Washington bureau

WASHINGTON — Ailing like most of the U.S. thrift industry, all Madison County savings and loan associations showed net losses or profit declines for the first half of 1988, according to industry figures by Sheshunoff Information Services Inc. The biggest loser was Madison County Federal Savings & Loan, the Granite City-based thrift that lost $1.4 million for investors and owners, followed by First Federal Savings & Loan of East Alton, which lost $451,000, according to Sheshunoff, an Austin, Texas, bank information and consulting firm. The other money loser was Highland Savings & Loan Association of Highland, losing $49,000, according to Sheshunoff, which obtained the data from quarterly reports the banks filed with the Federal Home Loan Bank Board.

While just three thrifts actually lost money in the first half, the other nine county-based thrifts turned profits but their earnings were substantially less than first-half earnings in 1987, according to Sheshunoff. For example, Germania Bank (a federal savings bank) earned $340,000 in the first half of 1988 but that was a 71.1 percent drop from 1987 first-half profits. Also showing a profit decline was Home Federal Savings of Alton, which made $67,000, a 15.5 percent decrease from the same period last year, according to Sheshunoff.

Elsewhere in the Metro East region, Illinois Federal Savings & Loan Association of Fairview Heights lost $2.4 million to lead all St. Clair County-based thrifts in losses for the first half of 1988, Sheshunoff said. Midwest Home Federal Savings Bank lost $1.5 million and Frontier Financial lost $558,000. Two of five St. Clair thrifts made money, First Federal Savings & Loan Association of Mascoutah ($165,000) and New Athens Saving & Loan Association of New Athens ($52,000).

In Illinois, thrifts earned $56.4 million in the first two quarters of 1988, a $14.8 million loss decrease from the same period in 1987. Sheshunoff lists Illinois in a six-state region that includes Wisconsin, Ohio, Michigan, Indiana and West Virginia — a group whose first-half assets climbed to $191.5 billion (up 2.9 percent) but whose net income of $302.2 million was a 12.9 percent drop from the year before.

Nationally, the savings and loan crisis deepened as U.S. federally insured thrifts lost a net $7.1 billion in the first half of 1988, with Texas and other oil patch states suffering the biggest losses, according to Sheshunoff.

Of the $9.9 billion in gross losses for the first two quarters, Texas thrifts were responsible for losing $6.6 billion, compared with the state's $2.6 billion losses over the same period in 1987, according to Sheshunoff.

"Very often the performance of a particular state is simply a reflection of the results of a few large institutions, not widespread problems throughout the state," said Sheshunoff President Alex Sheshunoff in a prepared statement.

"It would be nice to say that we can at last see the light at the end of the tunnel," he said. "However, the light has thus far turned out to be a freight train named Texas Loan Losses."

Last week, Bank Board chairman M. Danny Wall told Congress that the cost to bail out the savings and loan industry could climb as high as $50 billion, $20 billion more than previous estimates.

Wall said his agency could revive the industry by applying a multi-million fee or assessment on savings and loan associations, an idea that drew criticism from thrift industry officials. They said the profitable S&Ls would suffer the most.

A.O. Smith Corp. has announced the election of Donald J. Schuenke to its board of directors. Schuenke, 59, will fill the vacancy created by the retirement of Dr. Edwin Young from the Smith board in April.

Schuenke is president and chief executive officer of Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Co. of Milwaukee, the nation's 10th largest life insurance company.

Smith's plants include an auto structural component production facility in Granite City.

Directors of the Smith corporation have declared a regular quarterly cash dividend of 20 cents per share of common stock (Class A and B) payable Nov. 15 to shareholders of record Oct. 31.

They also declared a dividend of $3.125 cents per share of convertible exchangeable preferred stock.

Supplemental income appeals discussed

By Nell F. Hartigan
Illinois attorney general

Q. I am disabled and I applied for Supplemental Security Income (SSI). Yesterday I received a letter stating that my application for the SSI had been denied. What can I do?

A. If your application for SSI has been denied, you may want to appeal the Social Security Administration's decision. You have 60 days to make a written request for reconsideration. If you are denied after reconsideration, you have 60 days to make a written request for a hearing. An administrative law judge will conduct the hearing.

If you lose the hearing, you can appeal again to the Social Security Appeals Council. Again, you have 60 days to make a written request for review by the Council.

If the Council refuses to review your case or decides against you, you have another 60 days to appeal the case to the United States District Court.

Most cases are resolved at the reconsideration and hearing levels of appeal. If you win an appeal at any level, you will be paid all benefits back to the day your benefits were applied for.

About real estate

By Don Campbell

Don't buy more sites than you can handle

Dear Mr. Campbell:

I presently own two houses that are mortgage-free, the one I live in and another that was a cash sale. We had a lot of renovating to do in the one we paid cash for. It cost $10,000 for the house and about $5,000 to fix it up. We were gyped out of $2,000 by a contractor. I paid him up front, and he never showed up to do the work, so we are doing the work ourselves.

We would like to buy another house for about $60,000 to $70,000 in a nice subdivision. Could you tell me which would be the best way to buy? We only have about $1,200 in the bank and our loans total about $10,000.

Is it wise to just stay here for a while and pay off these bills? When the house is finished we plan to rent it out for some extra income. I was looking for some houses owned by the Veterans Administration and the Federal Department of Housing and Urban Development for sale with down payments of $100 to $500. Are they good deals? My husband earns $25,000 a year.

B.J.
Answer: Whoa, let's slow down here a little. It is one thing to go out and buy a $10,000 house ($10,000? really? I haven't seen a $10,000 house on the market since the late 1940s), but it is quite another to start talking in terms of a $60,000 or $70,000 house. Not, at least, with $1,200 in the bank and $10,000 in outstanding debts. What you need to do is to digest what you have already "eaten," before taking another bite.

And what about this contractor who walked off with your $2,000? Are you going to let him get away with it? It certainly would be worth your time to make a few telephone calls to your state attorney general's office and, if your state has one, and I assume it does, the local office of your state contractors' licensing board.

But to get back to your original question, no, forget it. You are in no position to be making another real estate investment with the load now on your back.

Dear Mr. Campbell:
My wife and I recently have invested in a time-share condominium for two weeks each year. What information can you give me that will clarify tax deductibility of interest?
Mr. R.C.P., Reynoldsburg, Ohio
Answer: Well, it's an intriguing thought, but the IRS tells me that you'd better forget tax deductibility in terms of applying it to the purchase of a time-share condominium. It doesn't classify as a "second home" regardless of how many weeks you are occupying it, according to my IRS source.

I'm not sure how you financed the purchase of the time-share, but there is one way out for you: Use the equity in your principal residence to finance the purchase of a home equity loan and under current law, the interest cost on any home equity loan, regardless of what you do with the proceeds, is just as deductible as it is on your principal residence.

Hollywood Make-a-Movie kit cures boring home videos

By Richard Zacks

Video review
New York Times Syndicate

Someone is pointing a video camera at you and wants you to stop standing there like a chump so they can act natural? It's a contradiction in terms. Then when you freeze up, they say something pithy like "Wave at the camera."

Most home movies feature lots of bored people with forced smiles waving frantically. They outdo Ovaltine and warm slippers for bringing on Mr. Sandman.

There is a cure, however. "Hollywood Make-A-Movie" ($39.95) is a clever, slickly packaged kit that enables any rube to create semiprofessional-looking minnovies.

Open the box and you have three comedy scripts, props ranging from fake mustaches to meat cleavers, a booklet packed with production tips and, best of all, an audio cassette with sound effects and background music.

"Hollywood Make-A-Movie," which is not from Hollywood but rather Toms River, N.J., has hit on a smart idea for walking Joe Pumblefingers and his friends through the surprisingly complicated art of shooting a 5-minute feature.

They lay out each script frame by frame on a color storyboard with printed directions for dialogue and camera shots. The audiocassette announces, "Sound effects for frame one," then a beep. You simply play the tape and follow the storyboard for frame one. No dubbing after-ward. No editing. No endless shots of Rover refusing to roll over.

"People were spending $1,000 on a camera and after the first month they didn't know what to do with it," says John Marco, founder of "Hollywood Make-A-Movie."

Last year Marco decided to deep-six his video direct-sales business to develop this Spielberg-in-a-box concept. In June he debuted a comedy kit and hopes to have a horror kit out by late November. He is especially optimistic because Americans are expected to buy 2 million video camcorders this year.

"It's one of those ideas you kick yourself and say, 'Damn, why didn't I think of that?'" says Michael "Smooth" Carrington, a comedy writer and performer.

Sure, it is a great idea on paper, but does it really work? I decided to put the instant movie kit to a rigorous test with six jaded, thirtyish New Yorkers with experience in the entertainment business. I expected cynicism and put-downs. I was dead wrong; they loved it.

"I think a family could have a lot of fun with this," Wilkinson said. Hollywood Make-A-Movie has yet to achieve wide distribution in stores. Those who cannot find the kits can order them from Hollywood Make-A-Movie, P.O. Box 4986, 1314 Hooper Ave., Toms River, N.J. 08754, or call (201) 240-0600.

"Beetlejuice" (1988, Warner, $89.95). For the 30 minutes or so Michael Keaton is on-screen as a sleazy ghost, it is great.

"Rambo III" (1988, IVF, $89.95). The Russians have pulled out, but Stallone is still trying to save Afghanistan.

"Bright Lights, Big City" (1988, MGM/UA, $89.95). A lame adaptation of Jay McInerney's pop novella featuring Michael J. Fox looking out of place in the New York nightclub scene.

SALLY FIELD and Tom Hanks star in 'Punch Line.'

'Punch Line' lacks delivery

By Harry Hamm
Staff affiliate

Can a frustrated housewife from New Jersey find fulfillment as a stand-up comedienne? Can a medical student enjoy a side career as a nightclub comic by having someone else take his tests for him? And if the student and housewife meet, will they fall in love? If they do, would you spend the price of a first-run movie ticket to watch it transpire?

I hope not.

Tom Hanks, who was so good in "Big," comes off as just another whiny, self-serving jerk in "Punch Line" (2 1/2 stars). His character, Steven Gold, is a bright young man whose father is a doctor. Steve's dad wants his son to hang out his own shingle some day, but Steve would rather hang out at a Manhattan comedy club called The Gas Station.

Sally Field plays closet comedienne Lilah Krytsick, a wife and mother who has just taken $500 out of her cookie jar to buy some jokes from a guy in a greasy spoon who guarantees they will all get a laugh. A few days later, Lilah tries one of the jokes out at The Gas Station, only to have a member of the audience yell out the punch line before she does.

When Steve and Lilah meet, Steve begrudgingly agrees to tutor her in the fine art of glib-getting. Steve teaches Lilah to get laughs from situations instead of gags, arising both from her personal life and from answers she gets from asking the audience questions. Lilah takes Steve's advice and is instantly funny. She becomes a mixture of Phyllis Diller and Erma Bombeck in a cloth coat.

Love, or at least a reasonable facsimile, starts to bloom between Steve and Lilah, although Lilah does not want to forget about her husband (insurance agent (John Goodman) and her three darling little girls. And while Steve and Lilah are working out this little wrinkle, they also find themselves competing on a televised shot at The Gas Station. The show features up-and-coming comedians in a type of laugh-off contest with the judges giving the winner a chance to appear on the "Tonight Show."

Hank's character occasionally is funny but Field's Lilah is not, even when the script is trying to tell us she is. The resolution of this film's personal and professional dilemmas meanders to an unworthy finish that gives the film an artificial ending.

"Punch Line" is a motion picture where nothing really works, including the jokes. Rated R (language and adult situational comedy). Running time: 123 minutes.

Evelyn simplifies complex ballots, eases voters' task

Our favorite county clerk, Evelyn Bowles, once again is in the thick of election preparations.

It's a tough and intricate undertaking, but she always manages to make the selections as easy as possible for the voter.

COMPLEXITIES in the election process result from the differing districts and boundaries that fit within Madison County, where she is the chief election officer.

The goal is for each voter to help decide all of the issues that affect him or her, but to have no voice in those of other districts.

Ballots in this county will include the presidential contenders, the 21st Congressional District race, state senate races in the 49th and 55th districts (but not the local district, the 56th) and state representative elections in the 96th, 110th, 111th and 112th districts (no position in the 98th but two-way races in the others).

JUDICIAL POSITIONS are numerous on the Nov. 8, 1988, ballot, including five offices in the 5th Judicial District, serving the 27 southernmost counties in Illinois.

An Illinois Supreme Court justice will be elected from this territory, giving either the Democrats or Republicans a 4-3 advantage on the high court.

Also in the 5th District, eight are campaigning for four appellate judgeships. Two new appellate positions were created by the General Assembly and Judges Charles Jones of McLeansboro and John Karam Jr. of Belleville are retiring from the appellate bench.

NO LESS THAN EIGHT circuit judgeships will be affected by the November balloting in the 3rd Judicial Circuit (Madison and Bond counties).

There is no opposition for two Democrats seeking election as circuit judges.

Retention in office for new terms as circuit judges is sought by six in the 3rd Circuit, including three who are simultaneously running for higher judgeships.

Under Illinois laws, retention rather than election is sought the second time around. In this procedure, the judge runs without a party label. He has no ballot opponent and needs 60 percent approval by voters.

COUNTYWIDE RACES will decide the offices of Madison County auditor and recorder of deeds.

Regional Roundup

By Bill Winter

Democrats are unopposed for state's attorney, coroner and circuit court clerk.

Fourteen of the 29 Madison County Board positions are on the ballot for four-year terms starting in December 1989. In 1990, the other 15 posts will be filled.

In the 14 board districts involved this year, eight candidates have no opposition and there is Democratic-Republican competition in six districts.

EIGHTEEN PROPOSALS are on various ballots in Madison County, including three statewide Blue Ballot questions. One of the three is the issue of whether to hold a convention to write a new Illinois Constitution. It would replace the 1970 Constitution, which two decades ago replaced a 100-year-old state constitution.

Many Madison Countians will vote on whether the seven board members of Community College District 522 (Belleville Area College) should be elected by trustee district rather than at large.

In the Metro East Sanitary District voters will decide whether to set the tax rate limit at 47.8 cents per $100 assessed valuation for five years and then lower it to 31.2 cents, instead of the present 21.68 cents.

THE QUAD CITY AREA is not affected by 13 other ballot questions but those proposals are part of the planning and tallying that must be carried out by Miss Bowles.

Four school proposals are being submitted to voters along with two fire protection plans, two sewer bond issues and two ambulance tax propositions.

In addition, voters will decide on a street lighting tax, a park bond plan and a library tax proposal.

EVELYN'S SUCCESS in carrying out her duties has led to corresponding success at the ballot box. A few years back she said, parodying a Sara Lee commercial, "Nobody doesn't like Evelyn," and certainly she rarely has to face opposition for reelection, either in the primary or general election.

On March 15 this year, she led all 21st Congressional District political convention delegate balloting with 42,841 votes.

Her candidate, U.S. Sen. Paul Simon, didn't get the nomination but he did carry Illinois in the presidential primary.

THIRTEEN HOURS of voting will decide all of the general election ballot questions on Tuesday, Nov. 8. And, with the help of computers and county clerks, the results will be known several hours later.

It's an important part of life in a democracy, and we heartily recommend that all citizens take an active role.

Traffic safety contest open to state seniors

High school seniors are invited to enter the 23rd annual Illinois Editors' Traffic Safety Seminar Essay Contest and be eligible to win a share of $7,000 in scholarship checks provided by the AAA-Chicago Motor Club.

This year's question is "Should the legal driving age be raised to 18 for all Illinois drivers?"

A panel of health and safety educators from the University of Illinois will judge the essays, selecting five female and five male winners, based on new, well-supported ideas as well as organization and grammar.

Entry forms, which must be submitted by Dec. 31, may be obtained at high schools and by writing Seminar Headquarters, AAA-Chicago Motor Club, P.O. Box 5927, Des Plaines, Ill. 60017-5927.

Employers' support sought for Guard

Gov. Jim Thompson has signed a proclamation asking employers to support their employees who are members of the National Guard or Reserve.

"Every employer in this country, both large and small, public or private, has a stake in a strong national defense and has a vital role to play in ensuring its continuation."

"The understanding and support of all employers is more important now than ever with the increased demands placed on the National Guard and Reserve and their vital missions in maintaining a strong defense posture," Thompson said.

The state has more than 55,000 members in the Reserve components. Retired Gen. Stephen S. Crane is the state chairman of the Illinois Committee for Employer Support of the Guard and Reserve.

Chicago to host 14 international writers

Fourteen prominent journalists from publications around the world will participate in a cultural tour of Chicago this week in an effort to increase international awareness of Illinois' artistic diversity.

The writers will take a tour of the city's architecture and outdoor sculptures; parks and landmarks; the Art Institute; the Field Museum; and the Frank Lloyd Wright Studio in Oak Park. They will also hear music from the Lyric Opera, Chicago Symphony, and blues and jazz clubs.

Journalists taking part represent publications in Japan, the People's Republic of China, Switzerland, Turkey, England, the Soviet Union, Venezuela, Australia, Belgium, West Germany, France, Hong Kong and Italy, in addition to a representative from the U.S. Information Agency Foreign Press Center.

Weckman takes more confidence on 3rd trip to state

By Dave Whaley
Executive sports editor

GRANITE CITY — Much as the groundhog pops out of his hole each Feb. 2, Keri Weckman travels north every mid-October. This groundhog looks for his shadow. Weckman looks for a chunk of success at the annual IHSA girls state tennis tournament. A junior at Granite City High School, Weckman is making her third trip to state in three tries. She's hoping a trend continues.

Weckman didn't win a match at state her freshman year, but managed to win one last year. "If I could win two or three matches up there, it would really make me feel good," said Weckman. "I've got more confidence in myself."

While some high school athletes never get to perform in their sports' big event, it's almost become old hat to Weckman, who finished second at the Wood River Sectional last week-end. But she's still excited at the prospect for success in Mt. Prospect, where the state tournament began this morning.

"There are a lot of players up there (120)," said Weckman. "It was a little scary my first year. But I'm used to playing in big tournaments."

In addition to winning one match at state as a sophomore, Weckman also managed to win one game in a match against Julie McKeon of Glenbrook North, the eventual state champion.

"That made me feel good, but I think it made her kind of mad," Weckman said. "McKeon is back as a senior this year."

Weckman began playing tennis when she was 11. Her father,

Ron, got her interested in many sports.

"Tennis was one of the last ones he got me to play," Keri said. "It was kind of hard at first. I had to work at it, but I really liked it."

Weckman went wherever she could to gain more experience and credits her dad and John VanBuskirk Sr. with molding her talent.

"I took private lessons from John VanBuskirk, and he gave me a lot of confidence," she said. "He made me determined to improve and win."

In addition to school play, Weckman usually competes in six or seven other tournaments during the year, mostly in the St. Louis area, including the Granite City Park District tournament held each summer.

Weckman said the teachers strike hurt the team's progress this year, but the team stayed together and played in the park on most days. It paid off for Weckman and freshman Melissa Croak, who also qualified for state by finishing third at the sectional.

"I went up to state with some friends the last two years," Weckman said. "It will be nice to have one of my teammates going along this time."

Weckman said it is a goal of hers to qualify for state all four years of her high school career. But this year's tournament is first on the agenda.

"I've got more experience, but it's still going to be quite hard up there," she said.

Well, it's probably hard for that groundhog to come out of his hole to make his appearance each winter. But you can always count on him being there. Just like Keri Weckman at the state tournament.

KERI WECKMAN (left) and Melissa Croak will represent the Warriors at this weekend's IHSA girls state tennis tournament in Mt. Prospect.

McCluer North gets Stoned, 1-0

By Dave Whaley
Executive sports editor

GRANITE CITY — Tuesday's game at the Gauntlet was a battle. The Warriors and McCluer North Stars battled for 100 minutes.

But in the end, the Stars seemed to take some advice from Bob Dylan. It's happened to many other soccer teams this year: Belleville Althoff, Chamrade, Cahokia and Belleville West. Now McCluer North has joined the club. As Dylan sang so many years ago, "Everybody must get stoned."

The Stars, fresh off a 2-1 win over top-ranked CBC on Saturday, were Stoned 20 seconds into the second 10-minute overtime. Fortunately for everyone involved, we're talking about a different kind of Stoned than Dylan was. Scott Stone directed in a perfect pass from John VanBuskirk just to the left of Stars keeper Rob Frost. Granite City hung on for the next 94 minutes for a 1-0 victory.

The Warriors are 6-2 in games played this year (6-14 overall) heading into tonight's regular-season finale at home against St. Louis U. High. McCluer North fell to 13-4-2.

Trojans face monumental task against Assumption

By Mike Blackshere
Correspondent

The great thing about sports is that anything can happen.

It's only been a few days since Kirk Gibson hit the home run Dodger fans will never forget. Vladimir Guerrero over Georgeotown in 1985; Doug Flutie's Hail Mary pass to Gerald Phelan in 1984; the Warriors over the East St. Louis Flyers in 1986; these are only a few things from the last few years, but the list goes on and on.

It is possible that the Trojans (2-5) could go to East St. Louis Assumption on Saturday and beat the 7-0 Pioneers. But it sure isn't very likely.

The Pioneers are an offensive powerhouse, having scored 263 points in seven games. Only four teams have managed to score on the Pioneer defense, which has only given up 38 points on the season. Assumption is ranked second in the Journal small school poll and third in the state Class 2A poll.

The Trojans are a young team trying to gain experience and confidence while building for next year. The Pioneers are an experienced, senior-laden squad that is headed for the playoffs.

Trojan coach Don Smith is looking at the bright side of playing the Pioneers.

"Even though we are having a bad season, if we could beat Assumption it would be a great consolation for the season," Smith said. "We know we can't make the playoffs this year, so the next best thing you can do with your season is to try and beat a team like Assumption."

There is no doubt a win Saturday would really be a boost to the Trojan program. But they will have to play a perfect game and hope they get a few breaks.

"We will have to be tough on defense, because if we aren't, it could be a massacre," Smith added. "We will have to sustain some drives on offense and keep the ball away from them. If we can do those two things and keep the score down, we will have a chance."

Assumption coach Jim Monken says his team has been on a mission all year.

"Our goal has been to make the playoffs, so we have treated the whole season as if we were in the playoffs," said Monken. (See PIONEERS, Page 4D)

CAHOKIA — The Cahokia Comanches celebrated their senior night by beating the Lady Warriors in 15-10 and 15-12 on Wednesday.

Both squads have had a tough year, but the Comanches are finishing strong. Cahokia is now 4-10 on the season, with all four wins coming in the last month.

The Lady Warriors dropped to 2-19, including their eight forfeit losses during their teachers strike.

Granite City was trailing for most of both games. Every time it would go on a run to tie the game or take a brief lead, Cahokia would come right back to regain the lead.

It was a close match and Cahokia coach Arnie Kinsella was glad to get the win.

"We never really did get a rhythm going," Kinsella said. "Tonight we were lucky to get a win when we weren't at our best. Their defense bothered us. They never gave us the same look twice, and we couldn't find any holes."

The Warrior defense, especially their blocking, has been the strongest facet of their game lately.

"Defensively, we played very well tonight," Don Deterding said. "Maybe our best defensive game of the year. Tonight they (the Lady Warriors) showed me that they wanted to go out and right themselves. When they got behind, they showed anger instead of fear. The second to the last game of the year might be a little too late to show that, but at least they did."

Although the Warriors played better defensively, it was the Comanches who had the better offensive game. In volleyball, defense will keep a team in the game, but offensive execution is need to win.

The Warriors showed good intensity, but they just didn't have enough of an all-around game to win.

"Defense you can play well with just determination," Deterding said. "But you need skill to play well offensively. In some other sports, like basketball, the better team doesn't always win, but in volleyball the better team almost always wins."

The first game looked like it would go to the wire when it was tied at nine. Comanche senior Marlo Johnson was hitting some explosive spikes, but the tall Granite City front line of Amy

Playoff-hungry Redbirds next up for Warriors

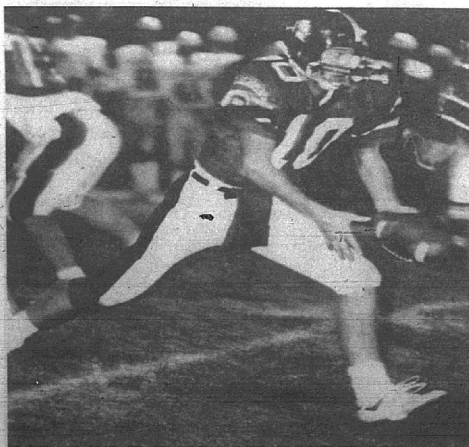

By Dave Whaley
Executive sports editor

It will be hard to find much good coming out of this football season in Granite City. But the Warriors could still affect the fortunes of a couple of teams.

Take the Alton Redbirds. The Birds suffered a tough 19-6 loss to East St. Louis last week and find themselves in a must-win situation if they still want a playoff spot. Alton is 4-3 heading into tomorrow's game against the 0-7 Warriors at Public School Stadium in Alton.

"If we had played the first half like we did the second half, we would have been in great shape," Redbird coach Collins James said of the loss to the Flyers. "We came out lackadaisical in the first half. We have to play 60 minutes."

James isn't picky. He knows his team will be favored. But even a one-point victory would satisfy him. You can bet the same goes for Ron Yates. It's been almost 400 days since the Warriors last won a football game.

BOBBY THOMAS hands the ball off during last week's Warrior game against SLUH.

Moad to make pitch for Mon-Clair team

Granite City will make its pitch for a team in the Mon-Clair League on Monday night.

Woody Moad is leading an effort to land Granite City a team in the Mon-Clair League, the premier amateur baseball league in the area. The league will hold a meeting Monday at the West End Tavern in Millstadt at 8:30 p.m. Moad will make a presentation to league officials.

Moad said he has received numerous commitments from players and feels he has a pretty good team. Darin DePew told Moad he would be interested in coaching and playing for the team. What Moad is still looking for is a sponsor. A local business or two is needed to help pay the costs.

Any business interested in helping should contact Moad after 5 p.m. at 451-1287.

Cheatham crowned Tri-City champion as 1988 season closes out with rainout

By Joe Senter

GRANITE CITY — The final event of the year at Tri-City Speedway last Saturday was cancelled due to the weather.

The U.M.P. late model stock car race of champions, consisting of track champions from 30 sanctioned tracks in nine states, was to be run. But weather conditions forced Tri-City promoter Vince Ghirardi to cancel the event. It has not been rescheduled.

Bert Cheatham was crowned the Tri-City Speedway champion when he beat out 1987 champion Mike Wallace for the point lead in the last race of the year. Wallace, the brother of NASCAR Winston Cup driver Rusty Wallace, was in a season-long point battle with Cheatham.

Wallace will be aiming at bigger things next year as he will be doing a lot of racing with the American Speed Association cars. It looks like he might be headed to Daytona Speedway with Rusty and the rest of the big boys.

In the final 1988 race at Godfrey Speedway on Friday, Jack Hewitt won the sprint cars, Mark Gannsmann won the sportsman's cars and Marian Frye won the street stock cars.

JACK BUCK introduces Jackie Joyner-Kersey and her husband Bob Kersey at an assembly at Lincoln High School last Friday.

Jackie comes home

Olympic champ honored at old high school

By Bonita Gower-Tillman
Staff affiliate

EAST ST. LOUIS — Jackie Joyner-Kersey isn't like Dorothy who lost her way home, but she shares one feeling with the character in the "The Wizard of Oz."

They both agree, there's no place like home.

Joyner-Kersey, a 1980 graduate of East St. Louis Lincoln Senior High School, was home Friday to share her two Olympic gold medals, her accomplishments and her smile with her hometown.

Her visit was greeted by students at Lincoln with awe and respect, shown in the red-carpet treatment she received. Confetti was thrown, and cheers and yells accented words of praise for the world-renowned heptathlon and long-jump winner in the 1988 Olympics held last month in Seoul, South Korea.

One of the greatest gifts Joyner-Kersey received from her alma mater was, induction into the Lincoln High School Hall of Fame.

Joyner-Kersey and her husband and coach, Bob Kersey, even forfeited a trip to the Bahamas, wanting instead to return home to East St. Louis.

"Even though I am so far away, I let people know East St. Louis is my home," Joyner-Kersey said. "It's my foundation.

It's because of East-St. Louis, the people here and the things I have gone through that I am successful."

Joyner-Kersey, whose childhood in East St. Louis was poverty-ridden, said youth must keep their dreams in their immediate sight.

"Growing up here was a struggle, but I never lost sight of where I was going or how I was going to get there," she said.

"The words and encouragement I got here is what made me successful today."

Joyner-Kersey won a silver medal in the 1984 Olympics, but blamed the second-place finish not on the hamstring injury she suffered, but on a lack of positive thoughts.

"Mentally, I was not tough enough," she said of the 1984 Games in Los Angeles. "I kept thinking about the injury, and I was too caught up in that. After I realized that, I learned to focus on the positive and that's what helped me this year."

To help other East St. Louis youth fulfill their dreams, Joyner-Kersey said she is working with the Seven-Up Co., with which she recently signed a two-year contract, to renovate the Mary E. Brown Center in East St. Louis, where she trained as a youth.

The community recreation center, which is adjacent to where Joyner-Kersey grew up, was damaged by the Oct. 4, 1986, flood in the city.

Russ Kleih, senior vice president for marketing for Seven-Up, said youth need to look no farther than Joyner-Kersey to find a real hero and real motivation.

"Jackie and Bob are real life examples," he said. "Jackie is a living legend and will be a permanent part of history. It's not only what she has accomplished, but also what she is. There's nothing artificial about her."

Joyner-Kersey said one of her greatest goals was to win a gold medal in the 1988 Olympics. Now that she has accomplished that in doubles, she said her sights are on the 1992 Olympics and feats in individual events such as the hurdles.

"Believe in yourself. Some people will try to take you off your path, but you know within yourself what your dream is and keep to that," she told the audience.

"Sometimes my dreams were cloudy and foggy when the possibility of boyfriends or babies came up, but that was not what I wanted. I wanted to be successful in the classroom and on the athletic field."

The title given Joyner-Kersey as "the greatest female athlete in the world," is evidence that she has reached that goal.

Cahokia

Cant, Jennifer Cavness and Michelle Bequette was blocking most of her shots.

Cahokia reeled off three straight points to go up 12-9, forcing Granite City to call a timeout. It didn't help as Cahokia reeled off another three straight points behind the serve of Johnson to win the first game.

The second game was even closer. Granite City came from behind to go up 8-6 by scoring five straight points behind the serve of Sharon Fikins. Comanche setter Rachelle Kinder kept getting the ball to Johnson who tapped a nice dink over the Warrior blockers to tie the game at 8-8. Cahokia called a timeout when it fell behind 12-10.

After the timeout, Cahokia quickly tied the score at 12-12 forcing the Lady Warriors to counter with a timeout. It didn't matter as the Comanches finished a run of five in a row on the serve of senior Missie Osia to win the match.

Pioneers

who is in his 26th season with a 161-56 record. "This is week eight of the playoffs for us. As an independent, we feel that we have to try for a perfect season to make sure that we get into the playoffs. So we just play every game like it is a playoff game that we have to win."

That is exactly what the Trojans don't want to hear. Madison has to hope it can sneak up on the Pioneers while they are testing the playoffs and steal a win on Saturday.

As a powerful independent, the Pioneers had trouble finding teams in the area to play them this year. Outside of the Trojans, Mascoutah is the only other area team to face Assumption, and the Pioneers whipped the Indians 34-0 on Oct. 1.

Assumption has also played Liberty (Mo.), Cardinal Ritter, Arcola, Aurora Central, Virden and Argenta-Oreana. They will face Pittsfield next week, so a 9-0 regular season seems within reach. Monken's teams have reached the state semifinals four times, but have never made it to the championship game.

The Pioneers feature a fearless fiveosome. Senior quarterback Vernon Slaughter has completed only 37 percent of his passes, but nine have gone for touchdowns. Senior Chris Harris has caught 11 passes for a 30.2 average and nine touchdowns.

Senior Jacques Norris, a starter since his freshman year, has run 128 times for 548 yards (6.6 per carry) and 11 touchdowns. Slaughter, formally a fullback, has kept the ball for 55 carries and 364 yards (6.6) and 11 touchdowns. Junior Armondas Fisher has run 72 times for 420 yards (5.8) and five touchdowns, while junior Damaris Kennedy has carried 25 times for 240 yards (9.6) and two touchdowns.

Fisher, Norris, Slaughter, Jesse Gurley, James Augustus and Corey Williams spearhead the solid defense, which has forced 27 turnovers in seven games. Assumption is also averaging 30 yards per kick return, and Harris has averaged almost 40 yards per punt. The Pioneers have had runs, pass plays, punt returns, kickoff returns and interception returns of at least 60 yards each.

Is that enough? The Trojans just have to remember that anything can happen. Maybe Kirk Gibson will show up.

Stoned

Buskirk up the middle. VanBuskirk let go a half-stall, half-pass toward the right corner which Stone got to before Frost did and directed into the the opposite corner.

It was Stone's team-leading sixth goal to go with three assists. VanBuskirk has a team-leading five assists to go with two goals.

"It was a beautiful goal," said Warrior coach Gene Baker. "We were battling all night to get things done. McCluer North is the kind of team that can force you into mistakes. We will have to play smarter against SLUH."

"We certainly had our chances in regulation and in overtime," said Stone coach Ray Stahl. "But when you make a collective defensive mistake like we did, whether one or four guys make mistakes, you would expect them to score. That's a good team over there. I can't imagine how good they would be if they had had a full season."

Stahl started a sophomore keeper in place of the stars' regular keeper, senior Jayme Sainardi. It was the first varsity start for sophomore Rob Frost.

"Jack's brother," said Stahl. Jack Frost was on hand as it was 15 degrees cooler Tuesday than it had been Monday, when the game was postponed by rain. But Rob Frost had the hot hand early, when the Warriors could have been up 3-0 or 4-0 in the first 11 minutes.

"We wanted to give him a baptism of fire," Stahl said. "You never know when you might need your backup keeper. Then the game started before a lot of our players knew it and he was tested right away."

Frost robbed Danny Weathers on a header in the first minute, then Chris Ryan shot got behind the keeper but was knocked away by a defender at the goal line. Frost came out to rob VanBuskirk, who broke in after a quick throw-in. VanBuskirk then just missed high on a header off Chris Nolan's corner kick at 11:00.

Baker was disbelieving when told the Stone keeper was making his first start.

"I thought that was Sainardi," Baker said. "He really played well in there. We came out smoking."

The Stars began to get some chances as the game went on, but Warrior keeper Scott Swanson made 12 saves.

"Scott grew with the game," Baker said. "He made a great save on that ball when the guy came out of the corner."

That was Randy Stedman in the first overtime. The Warriors had pressed hard in the fourth quarter, but never really got a great chance. Chris Ryan and Nolan had excellent games. Ryan rushed several McCluer North rushes from the sweeper position. Nolan was able to start several dangerous attacks.

But mostly the game was one of frustration for both sides until Stone's goal.

"There wasn't a whole lot of connected play," said Stahl. "I think it's safe to say we didn't play as well as we did against CBC."

"We take ourselves out of the play a lot," said Baker. "We get into a hurry and don't settle the ball. But this was a good win for us. SLUH will see the score and it will give them something to think about."

The Warriors will be looking for revenge tonight. SLUH knocked Granite City out of the Tournament of Champions. VanBuskirk will be in the lineup, which he wasn't when SLUH won that game. And the Junior Bills might even get Stoned.

NOTES: The Warriors had 16 shots and six corner kicks. They were called for 29 fouls. Baker received a yellow card in the third quarter when he disputed an obstruction call against Jerry Thompson. Weathers scored his first varsity goal in Saturday's win over Belleville West. Weathers' name was omitted from the game story in Wednesday's Journal.

In his first start for Missouri, redshirt freshman Corey Welch split the quarterbacking duties against Iowa State with fellow redshirt freshman Brad Fitzmaurice.

All Uphill Big Eight's Baddest To Come

By Mark McCall
Journal Staff Writer

If you thought things couldn't get any worse for the Missouri Tigers, think again.

The Tigers, who have been kicking away games against the likes of Iowa State, now face four consecutive contests against the Big Eight's upper echelon: Oklahoma State, Nebraska, Colorado and Oklahoma. Those four enter this weekend's action with a combined record of 20-4. Three of the four—Nebraska, Oklahoma and Oklahoma State—were ranked in the Top 10 last week.

Missouri begins its odyssey into the Big Eight's first division Saturday when the Tigers meet Oklahoma State in a 3 p.m. contest (KMOX-AM, 1120; WIL-AM, 1430) in Stillwater, Okla.

Oklahoma State had been undefeated and flying high, but was grounded by Nebraska last Saturday in Lincoln.

The Tigers, meanwhile, have yet to leave the runway in '88. Missouri, 2-3-1, took another backwards step last week with a 21-3 homecoming loss to Iowa State. The Tigers were their own worst enemy in that one, turning the ball over six times, including twice inside the Cyclones' 5-yard line.

But despite Missouri's troubles this season, Oklahoma State coach Pat Jones says he's leery of the Tigers.

"They have a lot of talent," he said. "They've been having some bad luck with the turnovers and that, but they have some talented players. I've always felt that Woody has done a good job there."

If the Tigers are going to give Jones and the Cowboys trouble, they will have to control the ball and keep State's offense on the sidelines. With Heisman Trophy hopeful Barry Sanders running the ball, Mike Gundy throwing it and Hart Lee Dykes catching it, Oklahoma State has one of the most potent attacks anywhere.

"All three have played well," Widenhofer said. "They're all great players. I think Barry Sanders is the best running back in the nation, and Dykes is the best receiver. Gundy is just a winner. He doesn't get the recognition he deserves, but he gets the job done."

Widenhofer isn't blowing smoke. Sanders already has cracked the 1,000-yard barrier, and is currently leading the nation in rushing with 1,002 yards. He also leads the country in scoring with 19 touchdowns. Dykes has caught 27 passes, and owns the conference record for career pass receptions. Gundy is the third-rated passer in the country, and has thrown for more than 1,000 yards.

So it would behoove the Tigers to maintain control of the ball. Missouri was able to accomplish that against Iowa State, gaining more than 417 net yards. But the Tigers weren't able to put the ball in the end zone.

Still, as the Nebraska game would seem to indicate, the Cowboys appear vulnerable on defense. Oklahoma State was giving up approximately 422 yards per game on defense going into last week's game, and that figure hasn't improved any.

Widenhofer did not commit to a starting quarterback during the Big Eight Conference call Monday. He did say he was pleased for the most part with the play of redshirt freshman Corey Welch in his first start. Welch split the quarterbacking duties against Iowa State with fellow redshirt freshman Brad Fitzmaurice.

Welch led the team in rushing for the second straight week with 82 yards. He was 5 for 8 passing for 115 yards. Fitzmaurice was 6 for 15 in the air for 67 yards. He also rushed for 20 yards.

Although he hasn't played quarterback in two weeks, junior John Stollenwerk hasn't been ruled out by Widenhofer.

Despite the team's disappointing loss to Iowa State, Widenhofer said the team's attitude is good. He said the next four weeks will be a test.

"We're really getting into the meat of our schedule," he said. "We've got some tough games coming up."

Michigan State Aware Illini Play New Game

By Jim Woodcock
Journal Staff Writer

The Big Ten Conference's coaching fraternity had many critics of the way Mike White had run his football program at Illinois, and the Rex Reed among them probably was Michigan State coach George Perles.

Perles' first year at Michigan State was 1983, the same season Illinois swept the Big Ten en route to the 1984 Rose Bowl. Perles was anything but awestruck by the Illini, though, choosing instead to mark his rookie year by:

- Openly questioning White's recruiting approach;
- Charging the Illini with late hits, bites, taunts and other less-than-honorable tactics; and
- Campaigning for stiff penalties against the Illini once it was learned White and Illinois were indeed guilty of several recruiting violations.

Perles remained an Illinois adversary until January, when White resigned under pressure following a second round of allegations by the National Collegiate Athletic Association. That's when John Mackovic was hired to quickly restore some dignity to the Illinois program, while perhaps gradually redirecting the Illini toward higher ground in the Big Ten standings.

Solar Mackovic has done both. And Perles, who will lead his Spartans to Memorial Stadium for a 1 p.m. game Saturday (KXOK-AM, 630), doesn't mind admitting it.

"Anyone who's won three (conference) games in a row to start the season, that's quite an effort," Perles said Tuesday. "I think that's a credit to John. I think he's surprising a lot of people—not that he wasn't going to do it, but that he's done it so quickly."

"It's a credit to their whole program. You look at the film, you see the way they play...they're playing the game the way it's supposed to be played. There aren't any extras (hits). There isn't anything more you can criticize as far as them acting up or anything. They're playing hard and tough, but they're playing it within the rules and they're playing it with class."

At the very least, the Illini are fast becoming one of the surprise stories in college football. Illinois is tied with only Indiana for the top spot in the Big Ten standings at 3-0, and thanks to their first four-game winning streak since 1983 the Illini enter Saturday's homecoming game with a 4-2 overall mark.

For a contrast in directions, consider Michigan State. Last year the Spartans were 9-3-1 overall, 7-0-1 as conference champions and 20-17 winners over USC in the Rose Bowl. This season the Spartans are 1-4-1 overall, 1-1-1 in the Big Ten; their first win this year came last weekend in a 36-3 romp at home past overmatched Northwestern.

However, other than a loss at home against surprising Rutgers in the season opener, the Spartans' defeats have come against Top 20 teams: Notre Dame, Florida State and Michigan. The Big Ten championship game will be a test of the Spartans' ability to throw the Big Ten standings into further disarray.

Also, the Spartans enter the contest with the league's third-best overall defense that so far has been particularly successful at limiting big plays. Mackovic has deep respect for this and won't argue with the logic that has made the Spartans one-point favorites over the host Illini.

"Being in the Big Ten is fun and fine and good for this week," Mackovic said. "But Michigan State is the best total team that we will have played up to this point. That's obvious—we're playing at home, we're 3-0, they're 1-1-1 and they're favored over us."

The Spartans, second in the league in pass defense, will easily be the toughest test yet for Illini quarterback Jeff George. Last week George led the Illini to a 34-6 win at Wisconsin with his best performance of the season, completing 12 of 32 passes for 306 yards and one touchdown.

Most of the Illini's damage last week was administered by senior running back Keith Jones, the Webster Groves product who punctured the Wisconsin defense for 99 yards and three touchdowns. The three touchdowns were a career single-game high for Jones, who had no rushing touchdowns at all last year and only two each in the 1985 and 1986 seasons.

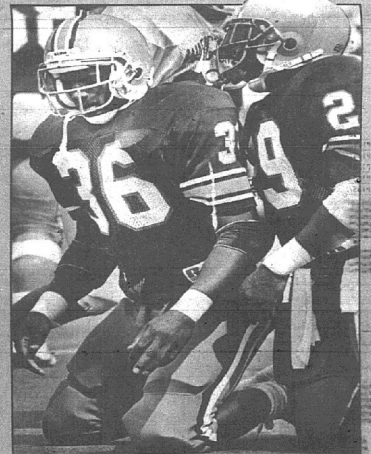

Jones now has seven touchdowns this season and may be slowly building a name for himself for the NFL draft in April. But Jones deflects praise.

"The offensive line is doing a great job of opening the holes," Jones said, "and the receivers are throwing the blocks downfield to help spring us for the big gains. Howard (Griffith) and I are determined to get 100 yards rushing in a game because of the hard work being done by the guys up front. It's a tribute to them."

Jones might be on his way to becoming the Illini's first 1,000-yard rusher since Thomas Rogers, a graduate of Lutheran North in St. Louis, accomplished the feat in 1984. With five games left, Jones has 636 yards, just better than halfway to the school mark of 1,250 set by Jim Grobowski in 1965.

Meanwhile, obscured somewhat has been the Illini defense. Although it ranks only seventh in the league against the pass, it enters Saturday's game rated No. 2 overall and No. 1 in defending the

"We wanted to establish in the beginning of the season that we'd play good defense, especially against the run," Mackovic said. "We've done that pretty effectively since Washington State. And also we wanted to establish a more balanced, consistent offense. And we've been successful there so far."

Fighting Illini senior running back Keith Jones of Webster Groves (36) just might have had to take a breather—he missed a 100-yard day against the Badgers only by a yard.
